Miner's Combination Tool.

John Jones, of Oregon city, Oregon, has just patented through the Mining and Scientific Press Patent Agency a combination tool for the use of miners in their operations with blasting fuse. For handling fuse in preparing it for a blast an ordinary pen knife does not answer the purpose well. This invention is intended to provide a tool to split the fuse either lengthwise or crosswise, to cut it off squarely from the coil, to press its end to receive the cap, and, finally, to press the cap tightly upon it. The tool is in shape somewhat like a pair of pliers, the points or jaws of which are formed, one flat and the other into a blade, constituting the splitting mechanism, and the flat jaw having upon its rear part a small projection formed into a cutting edge, which, with that portion of the blade which meets it, constitutes the cutter. Behind the pivot point the meeting handles are formed with grooves adapted to fit around and press the end of the fuse, and also with other grooves having ribs adapted to fit around the cap and press it tightly upon the fuse when fitted upon it.

Blasting fuse is ordinarily a tube filled with some combustible material. In order to get at this composition to apply the match so that it will readily ignite, the protecting tube is split lengthwise at one end. Sometimes, where no blasting cap is employed and the explosion is effected by direct contact with fire, it is necessary to split or cut the sides of the tube crosswise, so that the fire when it reaches these cuts may issue forth to produce the explosion. One side of the plier has its edge made in the shape of a blade, the cutting edge of which is adapted to be brought down upon the flat surface of the other jaw. By this construction the fuse may be split or laid open, and may be cut crosswise without entirely cutting through it. Upon the flat jaw near its rear part is a projecting jaw, which is ground to a cutting edge, and forms, with the blade of another jaw, a short cutter. In this the fuse may be easily severed from the coil or cut into desired lengths. Behind the pivot point on the inner side of the two handles, which are of some width, are cut grooves, which, when the handles meet, form a hole or die. In these grooves are formed ribs or beads. When the cap is fitted upon the end of the fuse it requires to be pressed tightly, making it secure and water tight, so that it will not be damaged when used in wet holes. The handles are opened and the cap fitted in the grooves, which are then brought together and pressed tightly around it. The beads press into it and form encircling dents which hold it securely to the fuse. Behind the grooves are others, smaller, which are made to fit over the end of the fuse and by compressing it prepare it to receive the cap with ease.

Minnie Madden played "Foggy's Ferry" at Denver recently. In the scene where she is to explode the torpedo her pistol missed fire. A veracious Denver paper says: "Miss Madden thought a little surprised at the misfire of her weapon, was cocking it for another shot, when suddenly a cowboy jumped to his feet in the audience, and flourishing a navy six, shouted, 'Stand a little to one side, gal, and I'll bust it for you. Blame my eyes, but them chaps ain't going to dish up that boat that way.' The ominous click of a forty-four caliber was distinctly heard, and as he pointed his pistol Miss Madden, with great presence of mind, without moving from her position, for the second time pulled the trigger fortunately with better success. The torpedo duly exploded, and the steamer glided on majestically in safety. The audience felt relieved, and nobody more so than Miss Madden, who did not care to be a party to a cowboy's marksmanship.

Near Rochester, in England, on the estate of the earl of Darnley, an important discovery has been made of Roman coins. Some workmen were digging up the roots of a tree a short distance from Cobham hall when they came upon a large earthenware jar in which were these coins, which are of bronze and number between eight hundred and nine hundred. The most of them bear the date of the fourth century, or about one hundred years before the Romans left Britain, and are chiefly of the reign of Constantine, Constantus and Constantius. Many of them bear the labarum, the first emblem of Christianity adopted by the emperors. The spot where the coins turned up is near the old Roman Watling street, which ran through Cobham wood toward London and the interior of the island.

A Great Head for Financiering.—"Sir," said a suspicious-looking individual on Congress avenue, accosting a business man, "in New York eleven men represent $200,000,000."

"Is that so?"

"Yes. Now, in Austin the wealth is not quite so much concentrated. We will assume that twenty of us represent $100,000."

"Yes."

"We will also assume that you and I are two of the twenty."

"Yes."

"Well, then, how would it be if I wanted to draw out ten cents from the capital stock of the syndicate—would you let me have it?"—Texas Sittings

A Syracuse (N. Y.) dispatch of May 27th says: Dinah John, popularly known throughout the State of New York as "Aunt Dinah," died at the Onondaga Indian reservation to-day, aged 109 years. Aunt Dinah was married to Thomas John early in the present century. Thomas was a warrior in Captain Cole's company of New York militia in the war of 1812. He went with the company as cook, and the couple served throughout the war. Aunt Dinah drew a pension for about fifty years. She was nurse to ex-Governor Horatio Seymour at his birth.

Wm. Peck, convicted of wife-beating, received twenty lashes on the bare back recently, at Annapolis, Maryland. The lash was vigorously laid on by the Sheriff, in spite of "pious appeals" from the wife-beater. This was done in accordance with a law enacted by the last Maryland Legislature. Such punishment will be far more effective with men who beat their wives than any amount of fines or imprisonment. They will think twice before they inflict blows, when they are sure to receive blows well laid on in return.

Colored Baptism.—The immersion of seven colored women in the Patuxent River at Ferry Bar, near Baltimore, Sunday week, drew an immense throng of all ages and colors to the spot, and lifted the Rev. James Jackson to unworldly heights of eloquence. "When the day of judgment comes," shouted the preacher, "a voice will cry, 'Come ye blessed and get ye eased!' I tell you what, brethren, grammar haint got nothin' to do with this matter."

Thad. Stevens and Conkling.—"Young man," said Thaddeus Stevens to Roscoe Conkling, when the two were in Congress together, and the latter had imperiously demanded the old Pennsylvania's reason for some action—"Young man, unscrew that curl, so that you can get your feet down upon the floor, and I will talk with you." History does not record the haughty Roscoe's answer.—Philadelphia Press.

A Social Outcast.—The Philadelphia Press says that everybody in Uniontown ostracizes a Duke, and he walks about the streets with his eyes cast upon the ground and his hat pulled over his heavy brows. It is said that the only man who befriends him, outside of his immediate family, is Billy McCormick, a town bruiser and chronic fighter, who rather likes the excitement of the thing.

At Pendleton, Oregon, Frank Anderson, a miner, was approached by an Indian, who demanded his money. On being refused, the Indian drew a revolver, but before he could use it Frank shot him through the body with a needle gun killing him instantly.

A report comes to us from the Fiji Islands, via France, that the Fijians are rapidly dying off from lung diseases. Other reports attribute this decimation to overloading the stomach with cold missionary. We trust the French have got the right of it.—Boston Post.

A young man looking over a pretty girl's shoulder while she was playing cards, observed: "What a lovely hand!" "You may have it if you want it," murmured she, and all that evening he was wondering what her intentions were.

Four years ago a party of heartless Southern men caught an alligator and so bolted his jaws with iron bolts that he could not open his mouth. They then returned him to his native element, expecting him to die of starvation. When again caught, recently, his alligatorship was found to have grown larger, though his jaws were closed as tight as ever by the bolts.

A Kentucky man when dying last week, told the watchers at his bedside that he saw heaven. He probably had a vision of a big spring of living bourbon whisky flowing between banks of sugar and lemon, with lighted gentlemen on either shore shooting at each other with gold plated revolvers.—Kansas City Journal.

The forty saloon keepers of Danville, Ill., fought against the increase of the annual license of $600. The temperance folks at once set to work to have the price raised to $1,000, and that put the liquor men to reflecting; the opposition was soon abandoned, the $600 license accepted and peace restored.

The only safe way for an obnoxious State Treasurer to do, if he does not desire to be overtaken, is to take all the money there is in the treasury and then the detectives will have no incentive to follow him.

MIDDLE-AGED MEN.
There are many at the age of thirty to sixty who are troubled with too frequent evacuations of the bladder, often accompanied by a slight smarting or burning sensation; and a weakening of the system in a manner the patient cannot account for. On examining the urinary deposits a rosy sediment will often be found, and sometimes small particles of albumen will appear, or the color will be of a thin milky hue, again changing to a dark and torpid appearance. There are many men who die of this difficulty, ignorant of the cause, which is the second stage of seminal weakness. Dr. S. will guarantee a perfect cure in all such cases, and a healthy restoration of the entire urinary organs.
